Live from Ridley Road

Hackney Host volunteer Ofure Alli records a sports commentary for BBC London 94.9 with a BBC journalist

HACKNEY's Ridley Road Market was the first stop for BBC London 94.9's tour of the 2012 Host Boroughs.

An old Routemaster bus parked up in the heart of the market for three days from 19 to 21 May to enjoy an array of entertainment and sport, and hear some local views on the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

On 18 May school pupils got a chance to try their hand at wheelchair basketball, while steel band Nostalgia provided a musical backdrop and presenter Eddie Nestor got people of all ages talking.

LET THE MUSIC PLAY

HACKNEY Marshes will host the BBC's biggest ever free ticketed live music event next summer as part of the London 2012 Festival.

BBC Radio 1's Hackney Weekend 2012 will feature six stages with 100,000 visitors across the weekend of 23 and 24 June.

The majority of free tickets will be allocated to residents, with a focus on young people. The first acts to be confirmed are Hackney's very own superstar Leona Lewis, and Brit Award winner Plan B. They will be joined by over 80 international and UK artists, bands and DJs, making it the biggest multi-artist line up ever for Radio 1.

The Council and BBC have worked closely to create a wide range of opportunities for local young people in the run up to the event, including working with schools and colleges.

The event will form part of Hackney's efforts to ensure the Games bring maximum benefit to the borough.

There will also be volunteering opportunities, possibilities for local businesses and chances for local music acts to perform.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "This is the biggest event Hackney will have ever hosted with world class musicians performing in our borough. This is an exciting opportunity for our residents to take part in the cultural side of the 2012 Games through the London 2012 Festival.

"Hackney is a young and creative borough and I'm pleased that the close partnership between the BBC and the Council means there will be chances for local people to get involved through volunteering and activities at schools and colleges."

Andy Parfitt, Controller

of BBC Radio 1, said:

"This is the most ambitious event in the station's 44-year history – we aim to enhance the overall London 2012 summer with an exciting and celebratory event aimed specifically at the thousands of young people who live in the boroughs directly surrounding the Olympic Park. We have the support of the music industry and in particular Hackney leaders – it will be a very special weekend."

The Council is proposing to introduce a number of dog control orders for the borough

Taking the lead

A PUBLIC consultation has been launched on Council proposals to tackle irresponsible dog owners.

The move comes after feedback from residents and park users. Key areas of concern raised were aggressive dogs; dogs that get into children's play areas; or are not on a lead when appropriate.

As a result, Hackney wants to create three 'Dog Control Orders', introduced under the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005, which give local authorities the power to tackle a variety of problems.

The 12-week consultation forms part of a wider educational programme, which aims to promote responsible dog ownership and support dog owners. Since last summer, the Council has been working with Hackney Homes, registered social landlords, and the charity Dogs Trust to offer 2,000 residents help with dog training, pet care, and to micro-chip 250 dogs free of charge.

Cllr Sophie

“Residents have said that they are concerned by a minority of owners who allow their dogs to act aggressively”

Crime, Sustainability and Customer Services, said: “We know that most dog owners in Hackney are responsible and control their dogs in public. We also understand the pleasure that owning a dog can bring. However, residents have told us they are concerned by the minority who allow their dogs to act aggressively and intimidate other people and animals. We are asking what residents think about our proposals, which we believe will help us tackle irresponsible dog ownership in Hackney.”

The consultation runs until 14 August.

The orders being consulted on are:

- A 'dog exclusion' order – to stop dogs from entering certain areas including children's playgrounds, sports courts, multi-use games areas, and marked pitches where games are in progress
- A 'dogs on leads' order – to stop owners from exercising dogs off-lead on roads and towpaths, and in car parks, communal areas of estates, and small public parks and gardens under half a hectare in size
- A 'dogs on leads where requested' order – to give officers the power to request that dogs are put on leads where they are not under the appropriate control of their owner, or where they are causing damage or acting aggressively.

Five-times Olympic gold medallist Ian Thorpe at the adiZone in Mabley Green

AN Olympic superstar who plans to make his comeback at the 2012 Games joined pupils from Gainsborough primary for an exercise session on Mabley Green.

Five-times Olympic gold medallist, Ian Thorpe, was at the park's adiZone on 11 May. It is one of 50 free-to-use sets of Olympic and Paralympic-inspired multi-sport equipment provided nationwide by sportswear giant adidas. The aim is to encourage communities to get involved in sport. Aussie star Ian, who hopes to return from retirement at next year's Games, said: "To be in one of the Olympic boroughs makes me really excited and I want to ensure I'm part of London 2012." The adiZone is located on the eastern side of Mabley Green by the tennis courts.

Never forget

A PLAQUE has been unveiled in Coronation Avenue, a site that suffered one of the worst Blitz bombings more than 70 years ago.

BBC News journalist George Alagiah unveiled the plaque on 15 May, joined by some 250 people, in remembrance of those who lost their lives at the Stoke Newington tragedy.

On 13 October, 1940, a 550lb bomb tore through the centre of Coronation Avenue, a five-storey block of flats in N16. More than 160 men, women and children who had taken refuge in the air raid shelter below died.

Clockwise from above: Iman Ebu Bekir Tezgel & Rabbi Avraham Citron; the plaque in place; Eleanor Kennedy who survived the bombing after she was turned away from the shelter; George Alagiah with Hallie and Tam, both 11, who read during the unveiling of the Coronation Avenue plaque

Rene Broider, 89, who lived close to the site but was staying at a

the raid, said: "When we were walking discovered one of the shops underneath the Coronation Avenue flats had been reduced to rubble. I just stood and cried as I knew many of our neighbours would have sheltered in that basement."

The block was rebuilt after the Second World War and a campaign to create a plaque as a permanent memorial began last year.

George Alagiah, also a Stoke Newington

resident, added: "I am a firm believer that a shared history – its highs and lows – can play an important role in binding communities together."

Many of the names of the Coronation Avenue disaster victims are listed on a memorial in nearby Abney Park.

News in brief

Youths sentenced

TWO youths have been sentenced for offences connected to the murder of teenager Agnes Sina-Inakoji (pictured), who was shot as she visited Hoxton Chicken and Pizza Shop with friends on 14 April last year.

Dwayne McIntosh Wisdom, 17, was found guilty of assisting an offender, possession of a firearm with intent to endanger life, and possession of an imitation firearm. He was sentenced to 13 years, with a minimum of 10 to be served. Police spotted him in the London Fields area a few days after the shooting. He made off, throwing a rucksack into a garden. It contained the weapon used to kill Agnes, as well as a pistol, ammunition and shotgun cartridges. He was arrested the following day and subsequently charged.

A 16-year-old male, who cannot be named for legal reasons, was found guilty of one count of possession of a prohibited firearm. He was spared detention because he was 15 at the time of the murder, and was sentenced to a three-year youth rehabilitation order.

Detective Chief Inspector John Crossley said: "We are pleased with the sentences imposed today. It sends out a clear message to those involved in gun crime."

Leon Dunkley, 22, and Mohammed Smoured, 21, were both found guilty of Agnes's murder and possessing a firearm with intent to endanger life. The pair were given life sentences on 12 April at the Old Bailey, with a recommendation that they serve a minimum of 32 years. At the time, DCI Crossley said: "Agnes was a totally innocent victim who had her whole future ahead of her."

Beat the noise

AS part of National Noise Action Week from 23-27 May, the Council is launching an extended out-of-hours service.

The Noise Service investigates complaints about everything from barking dogs and building sites, to loud music from nightclubs, pubs and parties. While the day service operates Monday to Friday, 8am-8pm, in response to residents' concerns and the rise in demand that the summer evenings bring, night service hours have been extended. Residents and businesses can now contact the team between 8pm, Thurs, to 2am, Fri; from 8pm, Fri, to 5am, Sat; from 9pm, Sat, to 5am, Sun; and from 6.30pm, Sun, to 2am, Mon.

In addition to the extended hours, the Council has introduced an extra team investigating night noise nuisance at the weekends. Both teams are able to issue Fixed Penalty Notices to anyone who has received a warning notice about excessive late-night noise, but has not taken action to rectify the situation.

The Council is also promoting ways in which residents can minimise their noise. For info call: 020 8356 4455; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/noise

Nine green spaces in Hackney are participating in Open Garden Squares Weekend 2011

NINE secret and not so secret gardens in Hackney join 214 London-wide to welcome visitors for Open Garden Squares Weekend.

Organised by the London Parks and Gardens Trust, the weekend of 11 and 12 June offers a rare opportunity to gain inspiration from London's private community gardens and squares, as well as discovering lesser-known public gardens that could be a just a stone's throw from your home.

Hackney in Bloom winner St Joseph's Hospice, which provides end of life care, will be opening its garden, which is normally reserved for patients.

Also usually closed to the public are Victorian garden Fassett Square, which provided the inspiration for the set of the BBC's EastEnders, and St John's Community Kitchen Garden in Hoxton.

Two public projects in Dalston are also taking part. FARM:shop is part of the Council-backed 'Art In Empty Spaces' programme that aims to bring empty premises back into use. Dalston Eastern Curve Garden was part of 'Making Space in Dalston', a series of small projects developed by residents and the Council, and funded by Design For London. Both projects are also supported by food growing campaign Capital Growth, along with St John's, St Mary's Secret Garden and Wenlock Herb Garden.

Also taking part is Clapton Pond, one of Hackney's 12 Green Flag parks – a national standard for excellence. The Geffrye Museum will be showing off its series of period gardens.

One weekend ticket allows access to all gardens over the weekend, and podcasts and self-guided bike rides can be downloaded from the website.

For the future

Pupils from Colvestone primary school at the Dalston Square Time capsule event

DALSTON'S past and present were preserved for the future when primary school pupils buried a time capsule.

More than 100 people attended an event at Dalston Square to mark the occasion.

Items in the time capsule included poems written by Colvestone and Holy Trinity primary school pupils. They worked with poets Michael Rosen and Francesca Beard, writing poems based on the origins of their names, their interests and their thoughts about the future.

With support from Hackney Museum and local history charity Building Exploratory they also made plaster casts of objects and surfaces around Dalston, which will be added to the 'Mapping The Change' archive at the museum.

Local organisations also submitted items, which included: an album of photographs from the Dalston Eastern Curve of future generations and it is fitting that they will have this opportunity to one day hear directly from community groups and young people present during this period of regeneration.”

Alastair Baird, Regional Managing Director for Barratt London, added: “In years to come residents of the borough will unearth this time capsule and Garden; samples of material used to grow produce at pop-up venue FARM:shop; a selection of everyday items collected by the Discover Young Hackney Cultural Ambassadors; and information on cultural events in the area. The Alevi Cultural Centre and Shiloh Pentecostal Church also contributed information.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: “We are investing to ensure that Dalston is a thriving community for residents Dalston in the year 2011.”

Dalston Square is a partnership between the Council, Transport for London, the London Development Agency and Barratt Homes.

It involves the development of over 600 new homes including shared-ownership housing; retail opportunities; financial support for artistic projects; and the Dalston CLR James Library and Hackney Archives, due to open later this year.

Prepared for 100 years

HACKNEY Museum has joined forces with the 14th Hackney Scout Group to create a nostalgic trip down memory lane in celebration of its centenary.

The museum's latest exhibition 'Be Prepared - 100 Years of the 14th Hackney Scout Group' opens on 25 May.

It features a display of uniforms, banners, badges, certificates and photos dating back to 1911. Past members may even spot themselves in some of the pictures.

The local group was founded in 1911 by Reverend Trask, who was chaplain to St John-at-Hackney Church, and since 1952 it has been based at the Den in Mare Street. It is estimated to have had around 4,000 members in the past 100 years. Currently there are 91 young people, both boys and girls, actively involved and a loyal core of adult leaders and helpers.

Scouting began in 1907, when Robert Baden-Powell, a Lieutenant General in the British Army, held the first Scouting encampment at Brownsea Island in Dorset.

The Scouts offers a programme of informal education with an emphasis on practical outdoor activities, including camping, woodcraft, hiking, backpacking, and sports.

Hackney has many links to the Baden-Powell family going back to the late 18th century. They lived in a house in Lower Clapton Road and Baden-Powell's father was born in Stamford Hill. He married his first wife Eliza Rivaz in St John-at-Hackney Church. Baden-Powell also has a community school in Clapton named after him.

Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care, and Culture, Cllr Jonathan McShane, said: "Hackney's link to Scouting founder, Sir Robert Baden-Powell, highlights how rich the borough's history is."

"It's wonderful that the group is celebrating their 100-year anniversary with an exhibition – if you were a past member come along and find out more about the Scouts in Hackney."

Bedtime reading

Novelist David Whitehouse in De Beauvoir Square

CONSIDERING De Beauvoir resident and writer David Whitehouse is faced with the possibility of transatlantic success with his debut novel, 'Bed', he seems strangely calm.

"I spend almost all of my time thinking about stuff that isn't important and panicking about it. If I thought about something like that, my brain would leak from my ears," he says.

After winning the 'To Hell With Literature' prize for unpublished authors last year – David has seen his book, which he began in 2007, snapped up by major publishers for distribution in the UK, USA and Canada.

He started writing Bed after going it alone as a freelance journalist. He explains: "I had just quit my job at a magazine. My phone never rang."

Taking 14 months to write, Bed is based around the character Mal – 'the fattest man in the world'.

"It suddenly became clear I was sitting in bed every day doing nothing, and I began wondering what would happen if I never got out of bed ever again. So I started to write the book," says David.

Citing further inspiration, he adds: "Around that time there was a real boom in documentaries about people with extreme physical conditions, particularly people who are huge."

However, he is quick to add that Bed isn't necessarily about a 100 stone man. He says: "It's the life story of a family, and about what family, the people you love most, can do to you over a lifetime. Also, it's about growing up. I've long thought being an adult isn't all its cracked up to be."

"The parts of Bed that are about Mal being the fattest man in the world marry the two – what it is to be gigantic, and why we're obsessed with it. Some people get so big they grow into their chair or bed. The marriage of the unimaginable and the possible."

When David talks softly about the extreme subject matter his book tackles, it becomes very apparent that he has a gift for gently amusing, if occasionally shocking storytelling.

He says: "I remember being little and loving getting mail. Now I get lots of mail and its all bills. Bed is about that disillusionment with conformity that everyone has at some point, and a man who is brave enough to do something about it – albeit dropping out, going to bed and never getting out again. Ultimately though, it's a love story with the world's biggest man at its centre."

Moving to London from Nuneaton 11 years ago to start a degree in journalism, David made Hackney his permanent home a few years back. "When I came to London, I remember “Always write what you like. If other's like it, it's probably a happy coincidence that you can't fake being amazed that I could buy a paper after 6pm. I think I settled in Hackney because you can buy anything you want, at any time you like.

"My favourite place is the canal from The Rosemary Branch down to Victoria Park. When it's busy, walking down the towpath is like being in a stressful computer game, dodging cyclists, runners and mad people."

Working throughout his early twenties for publications like Maxim, you can see why David appears unfazed as he gears up for his impending book launch. On one bizarre assignment, he remembers: "Henry Hill, the former gangster whose biography inspired the film 'Goodfellas', got me in a headlock and told me he was going to kill me. It sounds worse than it was."

So what's his advice for those labouring over a first novel? "All you can do is write what you like and send it to people who might be able to help. But always write what you like. If others like it, it's probably a happy coincidence that you can't fake."

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I heard there might be a hosepipe ban this summer because March and April were the driest on record. I'm proud of my garden and would like to make sure that I am ready for a ban. Where is the best place to get a water butt?

Wind up your hose and get a water butt

A: Watering the garden for your flowers or vegetables is vital, but defying a hosepipe ban should be avoided. The Council subsidises a water butt kit called The Rainsaver. It can store 220 litres of rainwater and costs £34. Whether there is a ban or not, it is important to save as much water as possible to reduce your carbon footprint. Residents carried away seven tonnes of compost to improve their soil or to grow vegetables in their gardens, on balconies, or in communal grounds on estates. The compost was made from food waste collected in Hackney through the Blue Bin recycling service and processed at a composting facility operated by London Waste Ltd. Gardeners came from all over the borough and were particularly interested by a demonstration of the 'Worm Café', a subsidised wormery which residents can buy through the Council. They were also able to pick up handy tips from Doctor Compost.

A resident from Cecilia Road, E8, said: "I think it is very nice to see how all the food waste and garden waste we have recycled gets back to us as beautiful compost. Our garden is going to look great thanks to this."

The event, hosted by the Petchey Academy, was organised with help from Hackney's Green Champions network as part of International Compost Awareness Week. Green Champions are residents who help the Council promote greener living in their neighbourhood.

Loggeries (inset) provide an ideal habitat for the rare stag beetle

A hard day's work for the beetles

BUGS and insects on Stoke Newington Common have a new habitat to explore.

A group of boys from the Sonshine Club helped Council staff and Stoke Newington Common User Group (SNUG) to create 'insect loggeries' on the common.

Loggeries are made by sinking a pyramid of logs into the ground to provide a habitat for insects, such as the rare stag beetle.

These insects then form part of the food chain for birds and other wildlife.

The Council is putting loggeries in a number of parks to provide homes for wildlife. Many insects and bugs need dead wood either for food or shelter, but urban parks often don't have enough to support such an array of insect life.

The Sonshine Club is a Charedi Jewish organisation that provides healthy, out-of-school activities for young people. The Council arranged for tools and logs to be on site for the project and two SNUG volunteers taught the young people how to construct loggeries and use tools safely.

Who lives in your back garden?

IF it croaks, flaps, cheeps or snuffles in the garden, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB) wants to hear about it.

The organisation's 'Make Your Nature Count' survey takes place from 4 to 12 June, and it is calling on people to count their garden wildlife during this period.

Gardens are teeming with wildlife in June, and the RSPB is keen to hear about birds, as well as creatures such as badgers, snakes, bats and toads. Who knows what taking part might reveal about each garden.

Last year nearly 100,000 people took part across the UK. The results helped build a picture of wildlife in British gardens and identify which species are thriving and which might need support.

In last year's survey, sparrows were the most common bird, seen in 75 per cent of gardens, followed by starlings, seen in 54 per cent.

Young blackbirds were recorded in 37 per cent of UK gardens. Cats (79 per cent), foxes (26 per cent) and hedgehogs (23 percent) were the most common garden mammals, with moles in fourth place, appearing in seven per cent of gardens.

Birds of prey, sir, what are you counting them for?

WOULD you know a magnificent bird of prey if you saw one fly past?

To celebrate its 30th anniversary, London Wildlife Trust is asking people across London to count kestrels, in order to help gauge the city's current population and find out where they live.

London Wildlife Trust launched its first 'Kestrel Count' in 1988. This year's survey will allow it to chart any changes in kestrel numbers over the last 23 years. The population in London declined during the 1990s, but the picture over the last decade has been unclear.

Rotimi Fani-Kayode

27 May-30 July, Autograph ABP, Rivington Place, EC2A 3BA

Photographs by the late Rotimi Fani-Kayode create this very personal exploration of race, spirituality and homoerotic desire at Rivington Place.

Born in Nigeria to a prominent Yoruba family that left Africa as political refugees, he finally settled in the UK where he produced his main body of work.

Using highly saturated colour and black and white techniques, Fani-Kayode created provocative imagery, at times with religious symbolism and almost always referring to his own feelings of 'otherness'.

He died, aged 34, in 1989 but parts of this founding member of Autograph ABP's work is represented in the permanent collections at the V&A Museum.

Stoke Newington Literary Festival

3-5 June, Various locations

HOPEFULLY it's testament to North Hackney that Alexei Sayle is appearing in the line-up for this year's Stoke Newington Literary Festival. The comedian famously once said something unprintable about the lack of things to do in N16. But time have changed. Backed by a thriving local arts and culture scene, the festival returns to concentrate on literary entertainment. Highlights include a discussion about former resident Edgar Allan Poe, led by actor and director Steven Berkoff, on the Tell Tale Heart author's influence. Other events feature Jon Ronson, Stella Duffy, Dan Cruikshank, Stewart Lee, and Paul Morley.

This year also sees the launch of the Stoke Newington Kids' Literary Festival, curated by, among others, John Hegley, Chris Riddell and David Walliams.

Liz Vater, Festival Director, said: "Last year was a sell-out so we've made the programme bigger and more eclectic, focusing in on some of the area's most influential residents and trying to keep the spirit of radical thinking, great ideas and debate alive."

Macbeth

26-29 May, St Leonard's Church, Shoreditch High St, E1 6JN

THOSE of a certain age may remember an old episode of TV series 'Blackadder' where a nonsense rhyme about hot potatoes is theatrically recited each time Shakespeare's 'Macbeth' is mentioned. The show's characters were sure the rhyme warded off any curse, evil spirits or bad luck that the script is historically supposed to bring.

The real play Macbeth – often referred to as 'The Scottish Play' – is a far more dark production. Fittingly, it now shows at St Leonard's Church, where Richard Burbage, the first actor to play the lead role, is buried.

Army general Macbeth meets three witches who predict his meteoric rise from respected leader to the throne. With his wife, he plots to overthrow the king, setting the married couple on a path to a murderously inevitable conclusion. Drums, swords and a backdrop of war are said to evoke the strong military overtones during the performance, promising to use the twilight in the church to its full advantage.

And don't worry – the curse is only relevant if spoken by actors or staff in a theatre. Though if you do happen to be an actor or staff reading this out loud in a theatre, best keep an eye out on the stage lighting: it's looking a little wobbly.

Lauriston pupils present their design to the experts

Circus skills

RUNNING away to join the circus generally conjures up images of high wire walks and fearless trapeze artists. But far from these death-defying acts, Lauriston Primary School pupils got a more businesslike take on life under the big top during their time creating and presenting design ideas for a Cirque du Soleil show.

Experts from Rolls Royce, City of Westminster, the Royal Albert Hall, as well as the internationally renowned circus troupe examined the pupils' model and listened to how the design was conceived.

The 3 May presentation at the Royal Albert Hall marked the final day of the Evolution project – run by the Royal Albert Hall Learning and Participation Team and Rolls-Royce – which aims to stimulate interest in design and engineering among younger children.

Frequently asked questions include how to apply and when repayments begin. Students are advised not to disclose personal or financial details on the public sites. JUST when you thought it was safe to light up ... The Grim Reaper rests a hand on your shoulder.

This final scene closed short film 'Smoking Will Get You' – Stoke Newington School pupils' chilling entry to national film competition Cut Films.

The contest challenged young people to produce a short about the dangers of smoking, then put them to the vote on social networking sites.

The three Hackney entries were screened to an appreciative audience of friends and family at the Rio Cinema on 12 May.

Stoke Newington was joined by Skinners' and City academies, which entered 'Do Not Jump On The Stairs' and 'Your Life Will Be Incinerated', respectively.

Each presented their research and experiences before judges, who ranged from film-makers to health professionals, who awarded Skinners' the regional first place.

Gillian Forbes, Tobacco Control Co-ordinator for NHS East London and the City, said the competition challenged students to 'explore attitudes towards smoking and create persuasive films which can be shared online'.

She added: "The research evaluation for this project shows that making the films strengthened young people's attitudes towards not smoking."

Smoking is the UK's most preventable cause of early death and two out of three smokers start in their teens. Hackney has some of the highest levels of smoking among young people in the country.

They mean business

A COMPANY set up by Clapton Girls' Technology College students is set to represent Hackney in the East London finals of the Young Enterprise Awards.

DragonZ Enterprise won the borough competition at University of East London in April. The sixth formers will now face eight other teams from across East London at financial services company Citi's offices in Canary Wharf on 25 May. The winners will go on to compete at the London final on 23 June.

Since last September, students across the capital have been setting up companies with support from teachers, business volunteers and mentors from charity Young Enterprise which runs the awards. The Clapton students' advertising and marketing service has so far generated over £500, and seen them win local business contracts.

Apply for up to £5k

A performance at the YOF-funded 'Hidden Heroes' event at the Bridge Academy and (inset) a photo from the related exhibition

YOUNG people have until 30 May to apply for up to £5,000 to plan, promote and put on youth events and activities in the borough.

From comedy jams to musical collectives, the Youth Opportunity Fund (YOF) has supported an array of youth-led projects over the past three years.

Government funding for this national programme ended in March, but because of its popularity in Hackney, the Council decided to support a local version for another 12 months.

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children Services, said: "It's not only about team-building and self-confidence, these projects give young people tangible skills that will be invaluable in later life."

Activities and events sponsored by YOF money in 2010/11 included an International Women's Day event run by the Hackney Young Women's Group; the formation of a Steel Pan Orchestra at Young Hackney Stoke Newington Centre; and an event to celebrate diversity and the lives of unsung heroes from the past at Bridge Academy.

Young people can apply for funding in groups of three or more. The project leaders should be between 13 and 19 – or up to 25 for disabled groups – and the activities should be targeted at the same age group. An adult connected to a charity or community organisation must support applications.

Hitting the wall

A GROUP from YH World were asked to help young journalist Akilah Russell with a university project about graduates and how they find work.

The team included camera man, Jenkins; interviewer, Akilah; YH World Director, Lucy; and me – YH World Assistant Editor. We all headed to a video production company called Brickwall Films to talk to partner Adam about getting into the industry.

We decided that we would make our content into a feature for YH World as our chat was really insightful.

We were introduced to Miranda who works for Brickwall as part of the Jobcentre Plus Future Jobs Fund. She showed us around the office before heading to a very arty bar to do our interview. Adam gave us an understanding of how competitive it is to work for a video

The successful graduates with the programme organisers

Road to success

SEVEN young people from Hackney have celebrated the successful completion of a programme aimed at equipping them with skills to pursue future careers. 'The Road to Success', organised by the Council's Youth Support Team, was a nine-week course for young people, aged 16 to 19, at risk of dropping out of, or currently not in education, employment or training. The programme supported the young people through weekly workshops, focusing on self awareness, leadership, goal setting and team work.

Nicole, 18, said: "I have learned a lot about myself during this course and I feel more confident dealing with other people."

Would you kiss, wed or run?

THREE young journalists hit the streets to make their version of BBC3 show 'Snog, Marry or Avoid'. Charmelle and Billie joined YH World in March as part of their school work experience and decided to continue working there in their spare time, while Gabriel works for YH World as part of his Creative Media Apprenticeship with DV8 Training.

Loaded with images of celebrities, they headed to the streets to capture people's opinions on film. The aim was to explore ideas about identity – and create some fun content for the YH World blog. Gabriel shot away as cameraman, whilst Charmelle and Billie asked the general public whether they would 'Snog, Marry or Avoid' the celebrities. A launch event on 12 May for the Vintage Midnight Walk which takes place later this year in aid of St Joseph's Hospice

St Joseph's Hospice is asking women to don their fascinators, curl their hair, and hard-starch wartime dresses for a Vintage Midnight Walk.

Proving that fundraising in fancy dress doesn't always involve a sweaty run in a chicken suit, this event is set to be a far more elegant affair – a 20th century fashion-inspired saunter through East London. The 10-mile route takes in Liverpool Street, Whitechapel, Bethnal Green and several areas in Hackney, including Shoreditch and Dalston, with 1940s-style entertainment on the way.

Organised by the Mare Street-based charity with Richard House Children's Hospice in Newham, it is hoped that at least 500 walkers will take part. Rannall Leckie, Events Fundraiser at St Joseph's, said:

"The walk is a great event for women to get together, see some fascinating East London sites by night and help raise money for a good cause."

The Vintage Midnight Walk will take place on 10 September. To sign up call: 020 8525 6000; or visit: www.stjh.org.uk

'Extremely positive'

EAST London NHS Foundation Trust has welcomed an 'extremely positive' report about its inpatient units.

The trust, which provides local mental health services, met 79 of the 80 essential standards in the Care Quality Commission (CQC) assessment, including a clean environment; qualified staff; personal and medical records are kept safe, accurate and confidential; and complaints dealt with properly.

Last November and December, evaluators met hospital staff, service users, relatives and carers, as well as checking ward records and complaint procedures.

They found service users felt staff were welcoming on arrival to wards; that their rights were explained; and staff involved them in decisions about types of care. The report said patients were treated with respect and their health and welfare needs were met. A number of carers also praised the support they received from staff.

Dr Robert Dolan, Chief Executive, said: "The reports are extremely positive and reflect the sustained efforts of staff to bring about improvements in patient care."

"We have worked hard to improve the safety, care and treatment of people who are admitted to our wards and we will continue to listen to our service users to provide the optimum support to assist with their recovery."

East London NHS Foundation Trust provides mental health and community health care services to people in Hackney, the City, Newham and Tower Hamlets.

Headway walkers en-route to Tower Bridge

Making Headway on the river

HEADWAY East London organised a sponsored walk across London bridges to mark the end of Action for Brain Injury Week, from 9 to 15 May.

More than 75 supporters and survivors of brain injury walked through the capital on 15 May, starting at Vauxhall Bridge and finishing at Tower Bridge. The walk is expected to generate over £5,000 for Headway groups.

Based in Kingsland Road, Headway East London provides support services for people affected by brain injury and their carers.

Miriam Lantsbury, Chief Executive of Headway East London, said: "It is really great that people support the work of smaller charities like Headway. Brain injury is a hidden disability and not widely understood, so this week gave us a chance to raise awareness about brain injury and celebrate the work of Headway in London."

A big day out for men

A PROJECT to encourage fitness and well-being among older men is coming to West Reservoir Centre on 27 May.

The Forward Thinking Men programme will offer health and activity stalls, yoga, rock climbing, sailing, free haircuts, bike maintenance, a dance workshop, plus the chance to win a day trip to France at its celebratory event, Men's Big Day Out. The scheme, funded by NESTA and delivered by Age Concern Hackney and Common Ground, aims to encourage people over 50 to share ideas, get inspiration and become more independent and confident about their future.

Juliet Formby, programme co-ordinator, said that at 75, life expectancy for men in Hackney is lower than the national average of 77. Men in the borough are also reluctant to use services aimed at improving health.

She added: "Forward Thinking Men is therefore tackling this problem head on by providing activities, tailored and planned by men, and building social networks for men who might otherwise be isolated."

Men's Big Day Out takes place at West Reservoir Centre, Green Lanes, N16, on 27 May, 12-4pm. For more info, call: 020 7241 5909; or visit: www.ageconcernhackney.org.uk

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

The estates name game

THE names of Hackney Council estates, and the houses and courts which form them, were carefully chosen.

There seems to have been no hard and fast rules governing the naming of the borough's estates however.

Prior to its abolition in 1986, all that appears to have been required was the consent of the Greater London Council (GLC), which had the power to veto suggestions so postal addresses were not ambiguous.

A proposal for a Smith House near a Smith Street, for example, would see the GLC asking a council to think again.

Several themes are apparent in the naming of estates. Former councillors or local dignitaries were frequently honoured. While place names in counties with links to parts of Hackney were the inspiration for some house names. Others were selected to recall local history.

A tradition of naming estates and houses after councillors, aldermen and other people who had devoted their lives to the borough began before the amalgamation of Shoreditch, Hackney and Stoke Newington in 1965.

The Colville Estate, N1, built in the late 1940s, is named after Lady Cynthia Colville.

'My sole qualification, I think, is that I just love Shoreditch, and have done so for quite a long time,' she is said to have written in acceptance of the honour.

In fact, she devoted many years to committees and organisations dedicated to welfare; was invited to stand as MP for Shoreditch in 1923; and was appointed magistrate, serving East London Juvenile Court in 1929.

Colville's Girling and Fulcher houses commemorate a lifelong councillor and Shoreditch mayor from 1919-22, William Girling; and the former borough architect, CT Fulcher.

Most other houses on the estate take their names from councillors or aldermen, apart from Jordan House, named after the then New Zealand High Commissioner, William J. Jordan, who was in office from at least 1937 to 1951.

When the Council's Housing Committee turned to naming the King's Crescent Estate, N4, in 1969, they received recommendations that the courts be named after places in Hertfordshire.

"Sir Hugh Middleton, Bart., who constructed the New River which commenced at Amwell Springs in Hertfordshire, introduced a new water supply into London, and Sir Thomas and Lady Abney, the prominent Stoke Newington family, had their country home at

“My sole qualification, I think, is that I just love Shoreditch, and have done so for quite a long time”

Clockwise from above: Lady Cynthia Colville opening Girling & Fulcher House in 1948; Ben Johnson; a playbill from the Britannia Theatre advertising a performance by Sara Lane; Sir Hugh Middleton; Chatsworth House in Derbyshire; William Spencer Cavendish, 6th Duke of Devonshire

Theobalds in the county. I therefore submit for the Committee's consideration Hertfordshire place names for the blocks in this development," the Housing Manager wrote.

A similar basis was used to devise the names of the Clapton Park Estate, E5. As the Housing Manager noted, Chatsworth Road almost certainly derived its name from Chatsworth House, the Derbyshire seat of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, who were frequent visitors to Loddiges Gardens in Hackney in the 19th century. The Clapton Park courts are thus named after places in the county.

Hoxton's theatrical tradition provided the inspiration for the names of courts on the Harman Estate in N1.

Shakespearean dramatist, poet and actor Ben Johnson, had many links – some more savoury than others – to Shoreditch.

While actors James Anderson and Sara Lane, and comic pianist John Parry performed at the Britannia Theatre, Hoxton Street, in the 1800s, which, the Housing Manager noted, won for Hoxton an enduring fame in the annals of the British stage.

The Archives doesn't hold source material to show the reasoning behind London County Council's naming of blocks on the Arden Estate, in Hoxton – but whoever was responsible had a penchant for some of Shakespeare's less fortunate and less appealing characters. The Tempest's Caliban, referred to by the Bard as a 'freckled whelp' features; as do King Lear's daughter's Cordelia and Regan and the star-crossed Juliet. Jollier times to be had at Falstaff or Oberon houses, perhaps.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. New Head Chef, Lloyd Hayes, introduces a traditional Spanish dish that's ideal for enjoying outside with some summer sunshine. The stew goes very well with a nice glass of wine or some Sangria. The chorizo sausage gives a lovely rich taste to this hearty meal. You can use chicken breast for a quick version, or a leg and thigh for each person, this takes a bit longer but will produce a more flavourful result.

Chicken and chorizo stew

Serves 4-6

Preparation time 30
30 minsCooling time 90
1hr 30mins

Ingredients

- 3 large chicken breasts, cut into chunks, or a chicken leg and thigh for each person
- 4 small cooking chorizo sausages (sliced)
- 2 white onions (roughly chopped)
- 400g tinned chickpeas (drained and rinsed)
- 3 sprigs rosemary
- 1tbsp smoked paprika
- 3 cloves garlic, finely diced or minced
- 2 bay leaves
- 500g new potatoes, sliced into large chunks
- 400g tinned chopped tomatoes
- Chicken stock
- A glug of olive oil

Method

- Use a large saucepan or casserole pot
- Sweat down onions in the oil, with paprika over a low heat, until the onions are translucent
- Add the garlic and rosemary, turn up the heat and cook for 2 mins
- Add the chicken and chorizo and cook until the chicken colours, then add potatoes, chick peas, tomatoes and bay leaves
- Cover with chicken stock and simmer until the potatoes are soft and the sauce is reduced – this will take 1 to 1.5 hours
- Season to taste, and serve with a big chunk of crusty bread and a nice glass of young Rioja or some Sangria

Have we got it right?

THERE is still time to have your say on the new strategy for carers in Hackney.

The Council recently drafted a new strategy for 2011-14, aimed at providing better support to the estimated 18,000 carers in Hackney, who devote huge amounts of their time and energy to looking after other people. The consultation is open to all, but the Council particularly wants to hear the views of carers themselves, including parent carers of a disabled child and young carers.

A carer is someone who is responsible, without payment, for the wellbeing of another person. The draft strategy identifies four priority areas:

- Personalised support for carers and those they look after, enabling them to have a family and community life
- Supporting carers to remain mentally and physically well
- Support to stay in work,

education and training

• Recognising the value of carers and involving them in designing care provision. Read the full draft carers strategy and action plan online at: www.hackney.gov.uk/carers

To request a paper copy call: 020 8356 5131. To comment on the draft strategy, e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk including 'carers strategy' in the subject line. The consultation runs until 27 June.
